The International Wolf Center is a beloved Minnesota institution, but its decades-old exhibits needed a refresh for a new generation of visitors. The SRS team worked closely with the project architect and general contractor to visualize changes to the exhibit spaces themselves, in addition to designing, developing, and fabricating new interpretive exhibits.

To maximize project resources, the new exhibits incorporate existing taxidermy with newly created groundforms and dioramas. Extensive photomurals immerse visitors in the North Woods, while hands-on interactive components help visitors understand that conflicts between wolves and humans arise primarily over territory. Ultimately, the bright, modern exhibits welcome visitors and encourage them to discover key wolf behaviors and how they can support healthy wolf populations in the future.
